The judicial process, as we understand it would be impossible unless the truth were elicited by two opposing sides putting before the court different facets of truth. There is nothing more difficult in the world than to discover the truth, because truth is not something simple, something which is apparent, something which can be discovered by merely cooking at one side of it. It has so many facets, so many contradictions and inconsistencies, that it required two trained minds to put all aspects of it before the court, and third expert mind to come to a conclusion – a conclusion which is the nearest one can reach in the discovery of the ultimate truth, and thus administer justice according to law.
